SEYMOUR, INDIANA, TUESDAY, JULY 23, 1912.

PRICE TWO CENTS

BIG FEAST OF REAL MELONS PLANNED

Motorists of Four States Tour Will Be Given Taste of the Genuine
Jackson County Product.

ENTERTAINMENT IS NOVEL

Cantaloupes Will Be Served at Mc-
Coy-Thompson Garage Upon Arrival of Visitors.

When the members of the Four States tour arrive in Seymour tomorrow afternoon they will be entertained in a manner altogether different from that adopted by any other city along the route and at the same time one of the principal Jackson county products will be given some excellent advertising.

The directors of the Commercial Club, who have the reception plans in charge, endeavored to make the entertainment entirely novel and at the same time boost Jackson county. With this in mind, it was decided to give the visitors a feast of homegrown cantaloupes for which this county is so widely known. The members of the committee took the matter up with Ross McCoy, manager of the McCoy-Thompson Garage, and he readily consented to assist in making the feature a success. He informed the committee that he would open his garage for the feast and would also furnish cigars for the members of the company without cost to the Commercial Club.

It was not known exactly what time the tourists would arrive in Seymour, and W. S. Galbreath, secretary of the Hoosier Motor Club and one of the promoters of the Four States tour, was called up over long distance telephone in order that the details might be ascertained. He stated that the tourists were scheduled to arrive in Louisville tonight and would be due in this city about 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. He further said that according to the routing the tourists would travel over the Scottsburg road, but when informed that on account of the recent rains this route was undesirable, it was decided to bring the tourists to this city by the way of Salem, Vallonia and Brownstown. Mr. Galbreath asked Mr. McCoy to go to Louisville this evening where he will meet W. G. Ward, traveling manager of the tour. Mr. McCoy will direct the tourists from Louisville to Seymour. According to the plans, a number of the local automobilists will make a run of several miles into the country to meet the visitors and escort them to the city.

Mr. Galbreath stated over the telephone that there were thirty-three machines and one hundred and twenty-five people in the party, but that this number would probably be increased as a number of Louisville people were contemplating the trip from Louisville to Seymour. He also stated that he would make an effort to drive to Seymour Wednesday and make the trip from this city to Indianapolis with the party. Mr. Galbreath was much pleased with the interest which was shown by the people of Seymour in the Four States tour and said that the tourists would greatly appreciate any entertainment which might be planned for them here.

A number of automobilists have already informed C. B. Davis, secretary of the Commercial Club, that they desire to participate in the escort for the motorists, and it is desired that all others who will take part hand their names to Mr. Davis today. As soon as the exact time and location of the cavalcade is known, Mr. Davis will telephone to all the automobile owners, who will take part, informing them where to meet and how the procession will be formed.

A number of automobilists from Brownstown and Vallonia will meet the party at those towns and will accompany it to Seymour.

After the melon feast addresses will be given by several local speakers and responses will be made by the visitors' orator. Over two hundred melons have been purchased for the "feed."

The committee composed of L. R. Fosgate, J. F. Shiel and H. C. Johnson have the arrangements in charge and are doing everything possible to make the entertainment a success and one which the visitors will long remember.

W. P. GALLEMORE BECOMES OWNER OF ICE CREAM PLANT

Purchased Interest of Delbert Custis
—Will Continue Factory
Here.

Delbert Custis yesterday sold his interest in the Seymour Ice Cream Company to W. P. Gallemore, and the latter is now in charge of the business. Mr. Custis and Mr. Gallemore have conducted the business in partnership for about two years and have done a large business. The patronage of the company has been increased to practically all parts of southern Indiana, and hundreds of gallons of cream are made and sold each month. The quality of cream, which is manufactured by the company, is very high and is consequently in big demand. Mr. Gallemore will conduct the business as heretofore in this city.

George R. Benton Assumes The Management of a Fine Hotel at San Antonio.

George R. Benton, formerly of Brownstown, has purchased a million dollar hotel in San Antonio, Texas and has taken immediate possession of the business. Mr. Benton has had much experience in the hotel business and has been very successful.

A number of years ago he was clerk at the old Hotel Jonas in this city and later went to Indianapolis where he was employed as clerk in several of the large hotels. Several years ago he leased the Lindon hotel on Illinois street and conducted it in a very satisfactory manner and enjoyed a large patronage.

The hotel which Mr. Benton has leased is one of the largest in the city and has done a large business for a number of years. Although the building is modern in every respect, the hotel will undergo some changes and improvements under the management of Mr. Benton.

CHANGE WILL BE MADE AT LOCAL TRACTION STATION

Herman Chambers Resigns as Agent
And Will Be Succeeded by C. T. Hardin.

Herman Chambers has resigned his position as ticket agent of the Indianapolis and Columbus Traction Company in this city, and will be succeeded, the 1st of August by C. T. Hardin, freight agent. Mr. Chambers has been connected with the local office for four and one half years and for some time has been agent.

In connection with the agency, he has conducted a restaurant in the interurban waiting room, which has been well patronized by the local people. During his stay in Seymour Mr. Chambers had made a large number of friends who regret that he will move from the city. He has not decided upon his future plans and will probably take a few weeks' vacation before entering upon any more work.

Mr. Hardin will be succeeded as freight agent by Lonnie Lane, who for some time has been employed as night man in the car barns. Mr. Lane is well acquainted with the freight department and will be able to conduct the freight business in a way which will prove most satisfactory to both the company and shippers. Mr. Hardin has purchased the lunch room from Mr. Chambers and will continue to conduct it at the same place.

Will Arrive Thursday.

The remains of the late Joseph A. Fettig are expected to arrive here Thursday on the 5:55 a. m. train via the Pennsylvania. In view of the fact that the public funeral services were held in the church at Santo Barbara, Cal. on the 28th of June, only a brief and simple service will be conducted at the residence on corner of South street and Jeffersonville avenue Thursday afternoon at 3 after which the remains will be taken to St. Ambrose cemetery for burial. Friends are invited.

URGES WHOLESALE SCHOOL REFORMS

State Superintendent in Favor of Holding Classes Entire Year Without Vacations.

SAYS SYSTEM IS OUT OF DATE

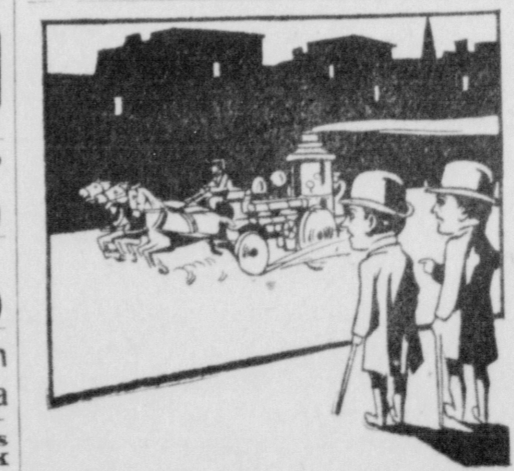

Head of Educational Department Believes in Domestic and Industrial Training.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction, Charles A. Greathouse, believes that the vacation period of the public schools should be shortened and may make such a recommendation. In case his suggestions are adopted the school boys and girls of Seymour will be deprived of the greater part of the summer vacation.

Superintendent Greathouse declared Monday that he believes the taxpayers will welcome such an innovation, and said that he is strongly in favor of proposing some such legislation before the 1913 General Assembly. Wholesale reforms in the methods of regulating the length of terms in the city schools of Indiana may be provided in legislation contemplated by Superintendent Greathouse and the State Board of Education.

Mr. Greathouse argues that the ancient system of breaking up the school year into several terms and allowing the school buildings and teachers to remain idle for long periods in the summer months should be abolished, and that a new era, embracing a system very nearly akin to the Ger-

We haven't all sizes in all these shoes, but we have all sizes in some of them. The fact that sizes are broken accounts for the price. Styles are mainly good—the few that are slightly off were formerly the highest priced. SEATTLE JUDGE RESIGNS OFFICE

Hanford Declares He Desires to Quit
while He Still Has Some Health Left.

CHARGED WITH MISCONDUCT

Proceedings Were Outgrowth of a Probe Into The Olsson Citizenship Case.

Seattle, July 22.—United States District Judge Cornelius H. Hanford, whose conduct on the bench has been under investigation for nearly a month by a sub-committee of the house judiciary committee, telegraphed his resignation today to President Taft. Judge Hanford gave ill health as the reason for his resignation.

The impeachment proceedings were the outgrowth of the judge's decision revoking the citizenship papers of Leonard Olsson.

The resignation brought to a dramatic climax the impeachment investigation by a committee from the lower house of the congress, which was ordered by the adoption of a resolution introduced by Congressman Berger, of Wisconsin.

In his telegram to the President, Judge Hanford gave as his reason for resigning that he cannot stand the strain under which he is compelled to work now and that he desires to retire while he still has some health left.

Judge Hanford's statement to the public follows:

"The almost constant strain on which I have been working for nearly twenty-two years has not only taxed, but exhausted my power of endurance. I am not likely to have a vacation rest but a change of occupation will be a welcome relief. I will continue to practice law in Seattle.

"In the investigation, which has been conducted by a sub-committee of the house of representatives, much testimony has been given by witnesses who know me and by others who do not, I am grateful for the commendation of those who have spoken and written in my favor—and as for those who have maligned me, I only wish to say that I would be ashamed of myself if I had not incurred the enmity of such people as they are.

"A judge is never so sure of being right as when his work has been criticised unfairly. Without boasting, in view of all that has been and may be said of and concerning myself and my work, I am glad that my record is what it is."

OUR PARTY.

The principles of progressive government are the principles of the Republican party. The great advancement, which has been made by our country since 1860, has been through the Republican party, as that organization was founded and is continued by the people and for the best interest of the whole nation. It was through the Republican party that the country has been brought from periods of depression into prosperity and success. It was through the Republican party that the great governmental and international questions were settled to the best advantage for our country, and it was while this organization was in power that every great step of progress has been taken. The Republican party was founded upon the principles of justice, equality and right government, and it still remains the party of Lincoln, of Grant, of Harrison, of McKinley and of Taft.

The party in the past has had many important questions to decide but has faced them squarely and has always made the right decision. It has never displayed the spirit of cowardice or turned its back upon any problem which needed solution. With the new questions, which are presented in this campaign, the party will do exactly as it has done in the past and will confront them fearlessly and fairly. This, the party of freedom, of independence and of equal justice, cannot be shaken from its firm foundation by the attack of any third movement instigated by disgruntled office seekers and politicians, who have been refused the right to dictate in their old party. In viewing this question impartially, it cannot be denied that the stalwart captains of Republicanism refuse to enter into any third party combination but will remain with the old organization, which has been tried time and time again and always found equal to any occasion.

Before any Republican votes for any candidate except William Howard Taft, he should stop and consider seriously his move. He should investigate thoroughly the conditions surrounding the proposed organization, and feel assured that it is worthy of his vote as a American citizen. Surely such men as Flynn, Stilwell and Lee cannot influence any patriotic citizen who places his country before all other political considerations. If viewed without prejudice it will readily be seen that the proposed new party is absolutely a one man organization. Never in the history of any political organization has "boss rule" disguised under the more polite name of "leadership" been used as effectively as by Theodore Roosevelt. The seven governors and hundreds of his admirers who enthusiastically supported him before the convention have realized his attitude and will have nothing to do with a new party. Roosevelt has never explained how he can continue his friendly relationship with the trusts and other unlawful combinations and still work in the interest of the masses. As an imitator of Lincoln he has apparently forgotten that a man is not able to fool all the people all the time. These are features why the proposed party cannot endure. No organization or national institution built upon the foundation of retaliation can succeed. The people will sooner or later find out the right and the longer the real truth is concealed the more complete will be its destruction.

The Republican party will continue to grow and prosper as in the past. There are many problems of importance which are demanding its attention and which can be solved rightly only through Republican principles. This party, the party of our fathers will continue to forge ahead and will unceasingly and without regard to outside attacks wage its battle for right and honor in the name of the American citizens.

When the boosters of the Indiana automobile manufacturers arrive in Seymour tomorrow they will find that all the boosters are not residents of Indianapolis. It will be shown by the entertainment, which has been provided by the Commercial Club, that Seymour is a live and aggressive city. Such features as these are a great help to any city, and while the effort may not show any immediate results, the benefits are far reaching and may be of more importance than anyone believes at this time. In order to be successful, a city must be advertised with the same diligence as a prosperous business concern, as the rule which applies to the latter is as equally effective with the former.

man system of school government, should be instituted if Indiana is to keep its rank in the forefront of the educational circles of the United States.

At least a half-day school session during summer months, particularly in the larger cities, should be devoted to industrial and domestic education, he said.

"There is no comparison between the disorganized methods of maintaining our schools and those used in a modern business," Mr. Greathouse said. "If the ordinary business man should allow such things as four-months vacations, with the machinery of his factory or store lying idle, within six months there would be no business for him to handle.

"The taxpayers of the state will welcome such an innovation as already has suggested itself to many of the leading educational minds of the state and I am in favor of making a sincere effort during the 1913 session of the General Assembly to have laws enacted that practically will revise the whole system of our school terms.

"Such procedure will not cost any more than under which we are losing time and energy now, and the 'bad boys,' who spend their summers hopping cars, taking clandestine swimming excursions, running the streets and doing other undesirable things, will perhaps be benefitted by such a new arrangement to a greater extent than the actual taxpayers themselves.

"We might just as well lengthen our school terms so that, instead of resembling the ideas of a hundred years ago, our schools today will keep abreast of the progress that is being felt in all other lines."

The forthcoming report of the state superintendent will advocate, among other things, a revision of school laws along a number of lines. Included in the report will be a statistical report from the manuscript department of the state superintendent's office, which it is believed, will modify the curricula of many of the Indiana colleges, universities and normal schools, which turn out the majority of the Hoosier public school teachers. The report is to be a digest of the work of the manuscript department during the last two years. It will be based on the grading of all classes of teachers and will show, in detail, the exact proportion of all the teachers in the state, who fail in teachers' examinations, or who make grades so low that they practically are equivalent to failures. Teachers without previous experience, those applying for one-year, two-year, three-year, five-year, professional and life licenses, will be listed in the report, according to their grades and the results of their examinations in each branch will be tabulated and analyzed.

At the completion of the report, Mr. Greathouse will be able to show exactly in which departments each college, normal school and university in the state is weak in its teachers' training courses. The state superintendent declared he will show the actual results of such a digest, regardless of where the blows may fall throughout the educational institutions of the state. The report will form a basis, he believes, from which college presidents and department heads throughout the state can bolster up courses of study that now are deficient and emphasize more sharply classes that hitherto have been in the educational background.

More than 12,000 teachers' license manuscripts will be graded by Sept. 30, the end of the fiscal year. From that list the digest will be made, to be used later as one of the major portions of the report. An assistant will be engaged by Mr. Greathouse at once to begin the work of tabulating the records in the teachers' examination books, which are lying piled in the state superintendent's office. As soon as the tabulation is made experts will analyze the results and a summarized form of the result of the investigation will be published.

PRIZE FIGHT PICTURES ARE PROHIBITED BY LAW

Congress Has Passed Law Fixing Heavy Penalties For Violation of Statute.

Prize fight pictures will never again be shown in Seymour—that it unless the new statute recently enacted by congress is repealed.

Such pictures as these became a thing of the past in the United States when the house passed a senate bill recently prohibiting the transportation of such moving picture films between the various states and territories or from foreign countries. Heavy fines for violation of the proposed law are fixed by the bill. The president, said to be in complete sympathy with the legislation, is expected to affix his signature to the measure.

Southern members of congress were especially interested in the proposed law because of the race feeling stirred up by the exhibition of the Jeffries-Johnson moving pictures in their section of the country. Senator Simmons of North Carolina and Representative Sims of Tennessee pressed the bill in the senate and house.

In several localities the feeling became so great that the exhibitions were called off. The Johnson-Jeffries fight pictures were the cause of much racial bad feelings in places where the negro population was large.

BLANKETS LEAD UP TO TRAGEDY

Constable Slain When He Went to Replevin Them.

OFFICER'S WRIT RESISTED

Dennis O'Donnell, a Terre Haute Constable, Went to the Home of Jacob Hess, a Switchman, to Serve a Writ of Replevin For Two Blankets, and in Resultant Quarrel Was Slain, Hess Being Badly Wounded.

Terre Haute, Ind., July 23.—Dennis O'Donnell, a constable, is dead and Jacob Hess, a switchman, is in jail seriously wounded as the result of a fight which occurred at the switchman's home when the constable called to serve a writ of replevin for two blankets.

Hess was asleep when the constable called, and in attempting to reach the blankets he pushed a daughter of Hess aside. Her screams awakened her father, who ran into the room.

The constable, according to the girl, attacked her father with a revolver, beating him over the head. Hess fell to the floor, O'Donnell at the same time firing a shot, which went wild. The girl handed her father a shotgun, and as he lay on the floor he fired pointblank at the constable. The full charge took effect in O'Donnell's neck, killing him instantly.

O'Donnell was fifty-three years old and left a widow and four children. Hess is an employe of the Southeastern railroad.

You Wonder What Are Loom-Ends

To those who do not already know we will explain as follows: Thousands of yards of short lengths are accumulated during the season by the large mills, ranging in length from 1 to 20 yards. We have secured the EXCLUSIVE SEYMOUR agency for a number of these mills. Especially the well known Amoskeag Goods. You could not buy better goods off the piece—but you would be obliged to pay much higher prices. In addition to these Loom Ends we have made great preparations in all departments, there being sensational low price lots of traveling men's jobbers' and manufacturers' samples.

Muslin and Knit Underwear, Hosiery, Corsets and Men's Furnishings offered to you at almost half the real worth.

The War Fifty Years Ago

A Confederate Ironclad Runs Amuck In the Mississippi. Rushing to the Defense of Vicksburg, the Ram Arkansas Fights and Parries a Powerful Federal Fleet. The Fire of Seventeen Ironclads and Frigates Encountered---The Armor of the Ram Penetrated and Whole Guns' Crews Destroyed---The Ram Finally Blown Up by Her Commander---General John H. Morgan Ends His First Kentucky Raid.

By Captain GEO. L. KILMER, Late U. S. V.
SIX weeks before the Confederate ironclad ram Arkansas steamed forth for battle, which was July 12, 1862, she was an empty hull anchored in the channel of the Yazoo river, a few hours' run from Vicksburg. Her guns and engines were lying loose on deck, the iron for her armor was sunk in the mud and water of the overflowing tides, and the bands and bolts had yet to be forged out of metal scattered over sixty miles of territory wherever it could be gathered.

In this unfinished condition Captain Isaac N. Brown, who had been ordered by his superiors to complete the monitor and fight everything on the Mississippi, found his ship. Brown had served in the old United States navy, though laboring under every disadvantage, with a powerful Federal fleet within six hours steaming and the boom of their guns sounding in the ears of the workmen, the ram was ready to weigh anchor the middle of July. She carried ten guns, six in broadside and two fore and aft, with a crew of 100 seamen and 60 riflemen from the army.

The message which summoned the ram to Vicksburg said that there were thirty Federal ships within sight of the banks "and plenty more up the river."

DESTRUCTION OF THE CONFEDERATE RAM ARKANSAS.

This was the prospect ahead of the ram when she set her prow in dead earnest for the anchorage near Vicksburg of the vessels of Farragut, Davis and Ellet the morning of July 14.

Brown hoped to surprise the enemy before daylight the 15th, but about 3 a. m. the ram got aground and lost an hour's time. With the rising of the sun she was steaming forward again and soon brought into view three Federal ships coming up the Yazoo.

A Lunge at a Federal Ironclad.

Brown ordered his pilot to stand for the central vessel of the three strangers, but before he could strike her she spun about, firing her bow guns into the ram at short range. The ship aimed at by the Arkansas was the new ironclad gunboat Carondelet. Her companions, the wooden boats Tyler and Queen of the West, also turned away, using their own batteries on the advancing ram. A lively chase of half an hour followed, during which time the ram, with her two sixty-four-pounder bow guns, raked all the ships. The Carondelet ran into shallow water, where the Arkansas couldn't follow, carrying twenty shots in her pipes, beams and principal machinery. The Tyler was hit eleven times and with the Queen of the West, steamed rapidly away.

Brown knew that the Tyler and the Queen of the West would alarm the rest of the Federal fleet in the Mississippi and crowded on full power to give chase. He had been hit in the right, but with blood streaming down his cheeks walked the deck, animating his crew. One of the Federal shots had cut a pipe, and the steam dropped down to twenty pounds, hardly enough to turn the engines. But for this accident Brown would have been able to use the ram in the fight. Soon after the ram swung into the current of the Mississippi it came in sight of a Federal fleet whose hulks alone seemed literally to bar the channel of the mighty river. There were ironclads superior in armor and speed to the ram, in all seven rams and ten seagoing ships of war.

A Dash Through the Fleet.

Without a second's delay to maneuver the Arkansas dashed into the Federal line, deluging gunboat No. 6 with shot. To the ironclad Louisville, next encountered, she gave a stinging broadside. Then the Benton, Louisville and Cincinnati were passed, the guns of the ram firing at everything within range, but not wasting a shot. Then the ram ran the gauntlet past nine of the best vessels in the Federal line—the Hartford, Iroquois, Richmond, Sumter, Oneida, Scioto, Wissahickon, Winona and Essex.

Two eleven-inch shells penetrated the iron armor of the Arkansas, doing fearful execution. A shell exploded in the cotton bale lining of the ram's bulwarks, sending up a blaze and annihilating a crew of sixteen men. Some of the shots merely denoted the armor of the ram. Four of the nine ships were punctured by the ram's shots. While she was engaged with them the Federal ram Lancaster tried to run her down, but the Arkansas held the Lancaster up with three shots through her steam pipes.

For an hour the Federal ships chased the Arkansas, but finally a rifle shell from the Confederate batteries at Vicksburg warned them that they had struck the dead line. The naval siege of Vicksburg was raised, and the Confederate army and the populace turned out to welcome the blood stained hero Brown and his daring crew.

The marvelous run of the single ship through an immense fleet of enemies

Federal General Ward at Lexington and General Finner at Frankfort about Morgan passed into Ellsworth's care and then into Morgan's. He knew just where his enemies were and, being headed for Georgetown, near Lexington, had Ellsworth forward a misleading telegram. This informed the Federals that Morgan had gone toward Frankfort.

A Fight at Cynthiana.

The raiding chief picked up and drilled new recruits for his battalions and also destroyed the track and stone bridges between Frankfort and Lexington and northward from Lexington toward Cincinnati. Two companies of the raiders then galloped on to the outskirts of Lexington, while Morgan and the main body of troopers dashed northward and struck Cynthiana, thirty miles above Lexington, on the road to Cincinnati on the 18th of July.

COMMODORE W. D. PORTER, U. S. N., WHOSE SHIP ESSEX FIRED THE LAST SHOT AT THE ARKANSAS.

Cynthiana was well garrisoned by cavalry, infantry and artillery.

Sending a squadron around to the right and a regiment to the enemy's rear, Morgan advanced the Kentucky lancers boldly up the main street. The Federal soldiers resisted at all points, and it took an hour and a half of desperate fighting to carry the town. Colonel Landrum and his officers and men of the Eighteenth Kentucky home guard stood out against heavy odds. Landrum defended himself with his pistol and shot down an aid of Morgan who tried to capture him. The garrison at Cynthiana lost about fifty killed and wounded and believed that Morgan suffered more than that, but some of his dead were thrown into the river.

Doubles on His Tracks.

From Cynthiana Morgan rode back on the Lexington road to Paris, which surrendered without a struggle. Halting there for the night, he struck southward, leaving Lexington to the west of his route, and rode into Richmond on the 20th of July. He was then far to the east of the region of his most daring exploits, and the Federals were looking for him everywhere excepting the point where he really was.

At Crab Orchard Ellsworth once more manipulated the wires. He learned the exact location of every body of Federal troops and wound up the exploit by countermanding in the name of General Boyle, the Federal commander at Louisville, every order for the pursuit of Morgan that had been given. The town of Somerset, ten miles north of the Cumberland, was the last halt of the raiders. Morgan was happy. He had ridden 1,000 miles through the Other Events of the Week.

On July 19 General S. R. Curtis' Federal command arrived at Helena, Ark., on the Mississippi shore. It had marched from Little Rock across hostile territory. General U. S. Grant was in command at Memphis, Tenn. General John Pope was organizing a new Federal army in front of Washington, Confederates were preparing for new campaigns against Washington and in northern Tennessee.

General U. S. Grant assumed command of the main Federal army at Corinth, Miss. This was restoration to the position from which he had been deposed after the battle of Shiloh in April. General W. T. Sherman succeeded to Grant's former command at Memphis.

On July 21 the Confederate Army of the Mississippi, under General Braxton Bragg, successor to General P. G. T. Beauregard, was transferred from Tupelo, Miss., to Chattanooga, Tenn. It numbered about 50,000 men. This was the first step in the Confederate campaign in middle Tennessee.

CHAPTER XXIII.

At the Verge of the Aperture.

The footfall of the Black Seigneur, near the guard-house of the dungeons, was measured, yet noiseless, as he stepped on the soft earth, alongside the stone wall, now toward the passage in the direction of the wheel-room, then back into the little square. That his thoughts, however, moved not in accord with that deliberate stride, the brows impatiently knit, and the quick glances he continued to cast over his shoulder, bore testimony.

Stopping at length near the Tour Bernard, he looked fixedly down at the town, wrapped in a stillness that should have reassured him. Nevertheless he appeared not satisfied; and had stepped out into the court again, when some sound he heard, or fancied, sent him quickly to an embrasure in the wall. From this opening—formerly for cannon in defense of the fens, and the poulain, or planking for the hoisting of goods—he leaned far out, his glance instinctively turning toward the barracks, some distance to the right and far below. As he stood thus, that which had first attracted his attention—the sound of a voice giving orders—was repeated; at the same time where had been only darkness now shone many windows, while to the left, near the entrance he had passed after leaving the stable, lights began to dance like fireflies.

At these signs of activity and the sounds breaking the general quietude, an exclamation fell from his lips; then, pausing only, a moment to listen and observe, he sprang toward the guard-house. Crossing the threshold, defined by a faint glimmer from a distant corner, he made his way past several motionless forms, into a low passage beyond. Here he called out impatiently; but from those depths, leading down into the dungeons where his comrades had gone, no answer was returned. His voice, hollow, mocking, seemed stifled in a tomb; more loudly he shouted; walked farther in, when an indistinct response was followed by a pin-point of light, and, ere long, by the bearer of a little lamp, Sanchez.

"The others?" At the head of a dark stairway into which he would inadvertently have plunged, had he gone farther, the Black Seigneur confronted the man, as he approached.

"They will soon be here," said the old servant, springing up the steps and walking after his master, who had already turned back toward the guard-room. "Jacques—curse him!"—putting out his light in obedience to a gesture from the other—"fumbled with the keys; pretended he couldn't find the right ones! So it took longer to open the doors."

"The prisoners?"

"I left our men working at the last dungeon to come on ahead—to let you know you might soon expect them."

"Soon," ironically, "may be too late."

"You mean—?"

"The hue and cry is out! I have long been expecting it; I do not understand why it didn't come before; unless a mountebank, locked up, was considered safe enough for the night—"

"Then some one knew—?"

"Some one?" A bitter laugh was quickly suppressed on the young man's lips. "Hark! Listen!"

"Sounds below! the soldiers!" exclaimed Sanchez, and started toward the window to look out, only to fall quickly back.

"What is it?" With his hand on the other's shoulder, the Black Seigneur whispered the question.

"A face! At the window!"

"So soon? The bounds are quicker than I thought! Or," drawing his sword, "it may be only one or two in advance. In that case—"

But no enemy, single or plural, met their view, either in front, or at the side of the guard-house; only the darkness, void, empty, and the bare rampart wall winding around the head of the Mount like a monster guardian dragon, asleep at his post.

"Here is no one!"

"No one! Yet am I sure I saw—"

"A shadow!" answered the other. "And we have nothing worse to fight!"

"Some one was there, Seigneur," stubbornly, "and fled!"

"Eh bien! He's gone!"

"He? It looked like a—"

"Back with you, quick! Is this a time for talk? Call those who can come—if they would save their necks!"

"Here they are now," exclaimed the servant, and, as he spoke, the first of their men, blowing out the light he carried, ran quickly across the guard-chamber and into the open air. Others hastily followed, until the gathering, swelled by those brought with them from the dungeons, stood expectantly before the little stone structure.

"All the prisoners are here?"

"All!"

"To the wheel-house, then!"

But as they hastened across the square and into the narrow way, the Black Seigneur again spoke to the man just ahead:

"The hunchback?"

"We left him below, locked up in the Devil's Cage!"

"The Devil's Cage! Quelle bonne plaisanterie! Although," looking back, "it may cost us dear!"

And indeed, behind the sound of pursuit came nearer; the clatter of soldiers' feet grew louder, until, reaching the little square and the guard-house, all tumult suddenly ceased. A momentary silence, strange, ominous, was broken by a din of voices, as the flaring here and there of torches threw grotesque reflections high against the grim background of black masonry.

To those now within the wheel-room, the cause of that abrupt clamor was not difficult to divine; his Excellency's soldiers had found the sentinels overpowered in the guard-house! Would the former stop to investigate; search first those subterranean passages? Already had the prisoners, the weaker of the Black Seigneur's men, filled the car, or hung clinging to the rope above; already was the wheel turning—almost before the key had turned in the lock at the entrance.

"Seigneur!"

"Sanchez?"

"When we left the wheel-room, we closed the door."

"When we got back, it—"

A footfall without interrupted, followed by the sound of a hand at the door, and other steps drawing near.

"Jacques!" An expectant voice spoke; waited; called louder. Then those outside listened; some one exclaimed, and hurried footsteps retreated toward the guard-house.

As they died away, in the wheel-room the car came up for the second time empty, and inquiringly the men there looked from one to the other; but, even in that moment of danger, not one of them moved, or made sign of impatience. Some must go; others remain, and stoically they awaited the word of their leader.

"Down with all of you! I'll let you out the line," taking a turn with the rope around a stanchion near the wall, "and then come down myself."

The command was unexpected; for the first time those that had never questioned their leader's authority, hesitated, and more sharply they obeyed; all save one.

"I'll let it out myself," said Sanchez.

"Get in!"

"No!" was the obdurate reply, when the Black Seigneur made a sign; hands reached up, seized Sanchez, and a moment later the car started down.

The line strained; as it played out, now running free about the stanchion, then stopping with jerks, the man in the wheel-house almost looked to see it part. The hempen strand, however, proved sound; held its human freight; but another danger pressed near.

Scarcely had the car begun its downward journey than an attack, indications of whose approach had not been wanting, manifested itself without. Beneath a sudden, savage assault, the door shook; yet engrossed at the line, every muscle strained, the man at the stanchion heeded not. Swiftly, mechanically he worked, apparently as unconscious of the clamorous soldiers without as of a silent presence within—some one that had been concealed in the little store-room adjoining, opening into the wheel-house, and now peered out; but at once drew back, as with a crash, the door fell in.

At first, in the comparative darkness, with only the sky at the aperture staring them in the face, the in-rushing black figures paused, uncertain; lights soon were pushed forward, however, and then could they see the great wheel going round, unwinding the rope; the man at the stanchion.

"The prisoners! He's letting them down."

"Cut the line!"

Some one with a knife rushed forward, severed the strand; but at that moment the car touched the bottom.

Then did the solitary man at the rope for the first time take to his own situation; with a backward sweep of the arm he struck so fiercely the foremost of those to rush at him that the fellow fell, hitting hard the stone floor. Those nearest stumbled, and drawing his sword, with a thrust of point or blow of hilt, the Black Seigneur, for a moment withstood the first confused on-coming; then extricated himself and leaped to the narrow space behind the wheel. Here was he protected behind by the wall; at one end, by the masonry jutting out, while, at the other, only one or two could attack at the same time. But in front, through the spokes of the broad wheel, they might well hope to reach him.

At once the soldiers sprang forward, when, seizing the wheel, the man behind, with a savage jerk, set it in motion. The swords thrust at him were turned aside, one or two of his assailants were caught in the ponderous mechanism, and, before those attacking him had recovered from their surprise, the blade of the Black Seigneur shot in and out; to the right, to the left. Those ahead fell back upon their comrades; two, however, were unable to withdraw, and sank to the ground before the wheel. A third, with his hand to his throat and making strange sounds, staggered back to the wall.

Momentarily disconcerted, the others hesitated. "In the fend's name, fear ye one man?" shouted an authoritative voice.

"A devil!"

"Tis the Black Seigneur! I had a good sight of him."

"Beat! beat!

"Mid marsh-muck and mire—"

came in mocking tones from behind

"The mountebank!"

"Sacre tonnerre! But mountebank, or outlaw, you shall pay! This way!" And at the unprotected side of the wheel the commandant sought to bring the issue to a conclusion. One blade the Black Seigneur struck down, while his own weapon retorted with more effect, though as it did so, another soldier made a lunge, and his sword entered the shoulder of the man behind the wheel. A shout of triumph that fell from the lips of the Governor's trooper was, however, abruptly checked; lurching forward with the stroke, ere he could recover, something heavy—a brass hilt—beat like a hammer on his head and he dropped to his knees. The others pressed closer; but with the desperation of a man resolved to sell his life dearly, the Black Seigneur fought on; regardless of cut and thrust, was holding the narrow entrance, when from the rear, somewhere, came the report of a fire-arm.

"Back! Stand back!"

Those nearest the wheel, not unwilling, perhaps, to desist, drew away; other detonations followed and smoke filled the place, obscuring the gaze. In the yellow fog they waited; until first it was swept aside close to the opposite wall by a draft of air from the aperture of the adjoining store-room, and the commandant, in an effort to see, moved impatiently forward. Ere, however, he could reach the wheel, near the threshold of the store-room, he felt his arm suddenly seized.

"Look, listen!"

The warning cry—a girl's voice—rang through the wheel-room; but the commandant did not at once heed it; at that abrupt touch he had involuntarily wrested his arm away; he stared, not in the direction she who had called out pointed, but at her! The white, drawn face, the eyes dilated—

"You, my Lady! Here?" he stammered.

But she only made a wild movement; again grasped, drew him forward.

"Quick, or—" And suddenly was he brought to a realization of what she wished him to see; a figure drawing itself along, slowly, painfully, toward the verge—

"Don't you see? Rather than be taken, he's going to throw himself over!"

The excited, admonishing sound of her voice aroused the commandant. He gave a sharp order and the soldiers sprang forward; laid roughly hold of the prostrate form; drew it back. The Black Seigneur yet struggled, but not for long! A moment, and his eyes turned to the Governor's daughter.

"Ma foi! I must needs yield—to your Ladyship! Yet, what matter, since I have done what I came to do!"

His gaze, darkly glowing, seemed to envelope the shrinking figure whose cloak only partly concealed the gay, rich gown beneath; lifted to the brilliant, frightened brown eyes. "Your Ladyship has bright eyes, forsooth!"

An ironical laugh burst from his lips. "But sharper than their swords!" He strove to speak further, when a hand holding a weapon fell heavily. At that a cry escaped the girl's lips.

"No, no; you shall not!"

The Black Seigneur lay still.

"Ciel! It's fortunate we got him," ruefully the commandant gazed around. "It would have made a pretty tale, if—" he turned to the Governor's daughter, "I have your Ladyship to thank—" he began, and stopped.

My lady's figure had at that moment relaxed and fallen to the ground!

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE

FIGHTING THE UMPIRE.

Said this young man:

"The boss was always criticising my way of doing things. I wouldn't stand for it, and so I quit."

I knew the youth. He had changed places a number of times and always for the same reason—he could not stand criticism. When his employers found fault with his methods he was immediately up in arms trying to justify himself.

He deserved to fail.

I know another young fellow whose attitude is entirely different. He invites criticism. He says to his employer: "I am doing this way. Is it right, or would you suggest some better method? I hope you will watch me and correct me when I go wrong. I want to know the best and most efficient way."

Note the difference.

One is strong enough to see his mistakes and profit by them; the other deceives himself by fighting criticism. In general it may be stated that it is the big man who admits his error and corrects it. The small man resents the criticism and clings to his error.

Can you endure criticism? Or do you get mad at the critic? You say the criticism is harsh? Suppose it is. Forget the harshness and ask the question: Is it just? Does it touch the spot? Can I profit by it? All of us make mistakes.

It is only the egotist who believes in his infallibility. And he plays the fool who loses the benefit of a point by flaming up at the judge.

The wise man invites criticism. Indeed, the wise man if he cannot get a proper analysis of his work in any other way is only too glad to pay a competent judge to pass upon it.

Do not get mad at the umpire. His ruling sometimes may be unjust. If so the sequel will show. But if it is just, if it is applicable, you merely kick against the goads. If the shoe fits wear it!

Be kind to your critic. He is a friend in disguise.

You cannot afford to persevere along wrong lines. You must know the truth. When the critic tells you the truth grin and bear it.

Because—

"We arise on stepping stones of our dead selves to higher things."

A DRAGNET FOR MEN HIGHER UP

Whitman's Theory of the Rosenthal Murder.

MORE THAN A MERE POLICE JOB

Snares Now Are Being Laid in New York For the "Bigger Men" Whose Shrewd Planning Is Declared to Have Led to the Cold-Blooded Taking Off of Chief Witness For State in Far-Reaching Police Graft Case.

New York, July 23.—Strong in the belief that policemen connived at the killing of Herman Rosenthal, Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty did not throw all of his cards on the table when he went before Coroner Feiberg and testified for the benefit of the lawyers retained by the five men now held for murder, that there was no evidence connecting any of them with the actual murder. The little cards of coincidence and conjecture and suspicious circumstances were exposed freely, but Dougherty palmed his face cards—the evidence as to who the murderers were and where they are.

And so there was disappointment over the result of the coroner's hearing and District Attorney Whitman was gratefully accepting the offer of citizens of large means and public spirit to provide all the money necessary to pay Burns detectives for getting at the bottom of the police-gambler scandal and finding out what policemen had most at stake in silencing Rosenthal.

Mr. Whitman's attitude, plainly put, is a lack of confidence in the police sincerity, Dougherty and Commissioner Waldo excepted, and the feeling that nobody but Burns can dig up the truth. For the police, says Whitman, have lagged in the hunt and all save Dougherty are confusing the trail.

The deputy commissioner, playing the game as he thinks it ought to be played, trusting nobody and wary of treachery and double dealing on the part of his underlings, says that he can outwit the crooks in the police department and the conspirators who worked with them, and that the whole story of the assassination of Rosenthal is bound to come out. Moreover, Dougherty knows the name of every man who pulled a trigger on Rosenthal last Tuesday morning, and he stakes his reputation as a detective that they will be under arrest within a reasonable time—possibly within ten days.

Seeming Lack of Evidence.

Although nothing definite was achieved by any of the authorities concerned with the quest of the murderers of Rosenthal and the search for the plotters who directed the work of the gunmen, although there was a seeming lack of evidence before Coroner Feiberg connecting any of the five men now held for murder with the shooting of the gambler, and although the day showed little more than a skirmishing on the part of lawyers to get Shapiro, Libby, Jack Rose, Bridgie Webber and Sam Paul out of jail or to get terms from the district attorney, the investigation had advanced so far, under cover, that the district attorney and Dougherty could name the men who were in Forty-third street in Shapiro's gray car—the men who are wanted for the actual murder.

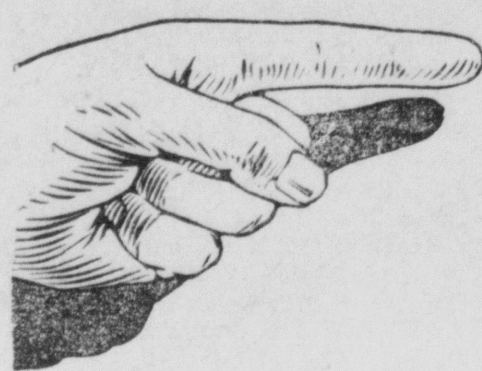

These men, the officers say, are Dago Frank, one of the most desperate gangsters the east side ever produced, a man who has boasted of killings and who has lived by blackjack and pistol; Harry Vallon, a gambler; Lefty Louie and Whitey Lewis and Harry Harwitz, notorious under his gang name of Gib the Blood. These are the men who fled town on Tuesday and who, some of them at least, are believed to have sought refuge in the gang holes of Chicago. They are the men that Dougherty is after. It was their names that no amount if grilling on the lawyers' part could drag from him before the coroner.

As for the others now under arrest—William Shapiro, part owner and driver of the gray car user by the murderers; Louis Libby, his partner; Jack Rose, who collected the gangsters after affidavit work for Lieutenant Becker; Sam Paul, the gambler who went to the Webber poker room where the murderers rendezvoused and Bridgie Webber, himself—Dougherty stands pat. He says he will have the truth out of them before he is done.

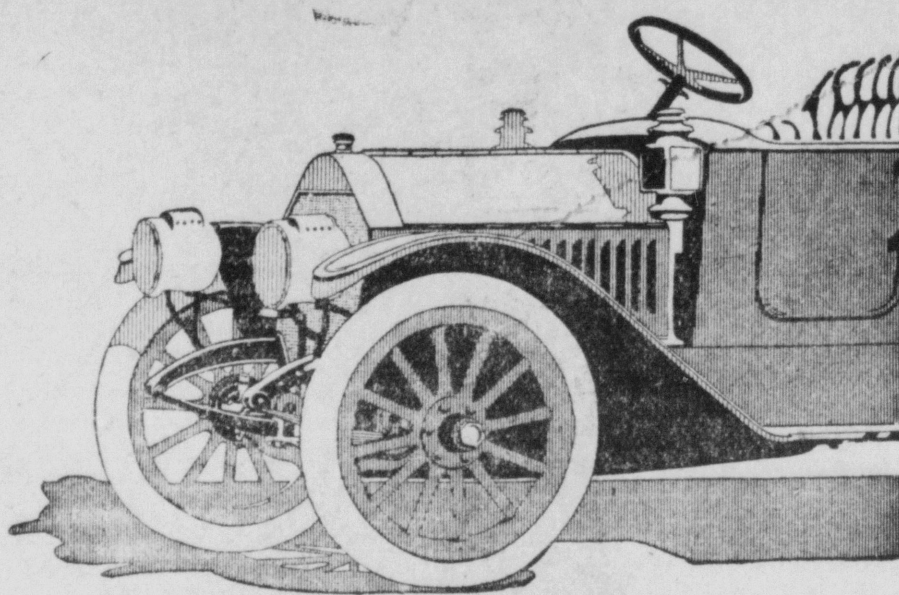

Both Whitman and Dougherty agree that it will be found that fifteen or sixteen men, at the lowest count, had a hand in the taking off of Rosenthal. "It will be found in the end that bigger men than a mere policeman had to do with the job," they say. It is for the big men they have in mind that Whitman and Dougherty are laying snares.

Decision Expected in a Few Days.

New York, July 23.—The case of Harry K. Thaw, slayer of Stanford White, who has been fighting through habeas corpus proceedings in White Plains to obtain his release from the state asylum for the criminal insane at Matteawan, was officially closed yesterday when William T. Jerome submitted his brief to Justice Keogh. The justice will hand down his decision the last of this week or the first of next week.

Three Maxwell Cars in the Indiana Four-State Tour

WHEN the Indiana automobile tourists arrive be sure to look for the famous Maxwell team, numbers 2, 3 and 4. Remember these numbers and remember the cars. They are the winners of the title of "America's Touring Champion."

You must see the Maxwell cars—they have been the most closely watched participants in this great motoring event. Maxwell cars have won the highest records in every competition. They won the 1911 Glidden Tour from New York to Jacksonville; they made the best team score in the 1910 national tour and won the Munsey Tour; they hold the world's record of 10,000 miles over country roads without stopping the motor.

For durability the Maxwell stands supreme. Over 91 per cent. of the Maxwell cars sold in New York State alone in 1905-1906 are registered again this year, proving seven years of continuous service. Car No. 2 in the Indiana tour has been driven over 10,000 miles already, in 16 different states. It is a Maxwell "Special." The two other Maxwell cars are Maxwell "Thirties."

Maxwell records of reliability are known to all of the 55,000 Maxwell owners. That is why they watch the three Maxwell cars in the Indiana tour, and in all contests, with pride and satisfaction. So will you, if you drive a Maxwell.

Look at these cars, numbers 2, 3 and 4. In size, power and style they equal cars of a much higher price. Then let us call for you and show you Maxwell cars in your own town. Be sure to ask us for "The Story of the Glidden Tour."
